THE COST OF ELECTIONS. - Labor is money. Time employed in unprofitable pursuits is lost and is difficult to be regained. There is danger that the habit, which is now forming in the South among the colored population, to devote so much of their time to politics and elections, must result in a serious depreciation of labor and the consequent reduction of the actual wealth of the country. The blacks, as a class; are strongly disinclined to steady labor. They are easily tempted to neglect useful employments for the mere idea of feeling that they are free to do as they please. Hence, the condition of the colored people, generally, is worse, in the necessary elements of comfort and support, than during the condition of slavery. Many of them have less surplus money than formerly, and their freedom, owing to the unfortunate tutelage they have had from their professed friends, has made them far less reliable in their personal responsibility, than formerly. We have not made special inquiry into this matter, yet we are inclined to believe that the credit of the blacks, as a general rule, is not as good as formerly. This state of things must continue to grow worse, instead of better, so long as the indisposition prevails to perform steady labor among them, and so long as they have such a proclivity to waste time or neglect work for matters of secondary importance, which can never remunerate them.—Raleigh Sentinel.
